Public Health Officer tests positive for COVID-19

As COVID-19 cases continue to surge around the Bay Area, Marin County's newest confirmed case further illustrates that community transmission is already underway.

In a video message, Dr. Matt Willis, Marin's Public Health Officer, announced that he had been diagnosed with COVID-19. Dr. Willis recorded the message from his home on Sunday night, where he has been self-quarantined from his family since his symptoms first appeared late last week. His test results were confirmed Sunday afternoon.

A message from your Deputy Public Health Officer

For today's update, Dr. Lisa Santora talked candidly about Dr. Willis testing positive for COVID-19 and what it means for our community.
